Newsletter No. 188 (11/02/18)

Hi everybody,

First news... the Society quarterly Steering Committee meeting is on next Thursday night (15th Feb). If you have any suggestions, or ideas for outings, trips or tasks, please let me know by email by Monday night. Also due to low numbers for the Great Ocean Road trip in 2018, I unfortunately had to cancel. Thanks to those that had intended to go, and those who joined me last year ...

NEW WALKING/PHOTOGRAPHY TRIP

Because of the GOR cancellation, I'm looking for those members and friends that would like to accompany me to the Kosciusko National Park for a 4 day mid-week Photographic Walking trip.

I intend to head off early on Monday 19th March, returning on Thursday evening 22nd March.

I have often wanted to return to the high country to walk the trails to Mt Kosciusko again, and the GOR not going ahead, has given me the opportunity this year.

Some of the walks I intend to do is from Charlotte Pass to Blue Lake, and another is go up the chairlift at Thredbo and walk along the boardwalk to Mt Kosciusko summit. My Dentist has had a place at Charlotte Pass for 20 years, and he knows some well-kept secret trails that have interesting high country ruins.

No costs involved with this trip as you will be driving your own cars, or carpooling (depending on interest), and you will pay your own accommodation and meals in Jindabyne. For the 3 nights we are there, we will either eat in, or eat out, depending on what people want to do. I'm thinking of staying in the cabins on the edge of Lake Jindabyne, as we did with the NDSW & Victorian High Country road trips in 2015.

I will be up early for sunrises on the edges of the lake, then taking sunsets at the end of the day, for those that want to join me.

I know its short notice, but REALLY looking forward to photographing this unique area again, and I'm hoping to find Society members (AND their friends) interested in joining me.

Interested ... RING me a.s.a.p. (0415 412 244) and let me know ...

Adobe soon launches Lightroom update to speed up its performance

 Photography

January 29, 2018 by Dunja Djudjic

In summer 2017, Adobe promised they would speed up Lightroom's performance. Judging from the latest reports, they will soon fulfill the promise they gave to their users. The company is soon planning to launch an update that will boost Lightroom Classic's performance.

According to a statement Adobe gave DPReview, the upcoming Lightroom Classic 7.2 release will “address key performance issues.” They say they have “optimized CPU and memory usage so that performance will scale better across multiple cores on computers with at least 12 GB of RAM.”

The upcoming update will reportedly result in the following improvements:

- Faster import and preview generation
- Faster walking of images in the Loupe View
- Faster rendering of adjustments in Develop
- Faster batch merge operations of HDR/Panos
- Faster export

Adobe tested the new update on three different machines. According to their results, the export tests with JPEGs were 36.7% faster on average, and exported DNGs average speed boost was 46.9%.

According to DPReview, their tests confirmed the boost in speed when it came to exporting files. However, their import tests showed no improvement. Adobe claims that it's because of user error, but I guess we just have to wait and see.

There is no word when exactly the latest update is coming, but Adobe announces it is “coming soon.”

Although they are pleased with the current results of the performance improvement, they plan to improve Lightroom Classic CC's speed in its further updates, too.

Looking for Canon Camera BODY (no lenses) – 550D, 600D, 650D etc

Friend of mine had a 550D and it got a problem with the sensor that was not worth fixing. He is looking for something at a reasonable price. He still has his lenses.

Give me a ring if you have one not being used these days. Greg (0415 412 244).

These days life seems to be about having a phone in our hands all the time, but never the less, it IS a part of our lives, like it or not, and understanding Society members usage is important to give best opportunity to communicate Society activities and interaction better.

It is for this reason Ralph & I have been designing a Survey to gain some information to help with the Societies communications, and promoting photographic interests into the future, and we are looking forward to your input, when the Survey is released.

FACEBOOK

The 'Shire Amateur Photographers Society' Facebook page has been well established for many years, and Graham Grocott has been a big part of its success, being involved since its inception many years ago, with Peter Miles.

It has over 800 members, roughly 50/50 men & women, mainly living in the Shire, and continues to be an important part of member's interests and contact with others. If you are a Facebook user, and have not joined yet, you should join ... You will enjoy the images, wealth of information, and social connection that the site offers. <https://www.facebook.com/groups/shireAmateur/>

The need to have alternatives with different Camera Groups (those that are heavily involved in competitions, and ones like SAPS, that are more about learning and social orientation), I feel we need to also have an alternative to Facebook with our Social Media.

By posting photographs, it gives you the opportunity to receive feedback, and encouragement from other members.

Writing a comment to describe your thoughts on a person's image, is important to their photographic development, and is a lot more personal and constructive than just a 'like' ...

There are people who really enjoy their Facebook community, and those who don't like the format, therefore don't get involved.

The survey will give us a better indication, but I'm expecting maybe 60% of our members, either don't use, or seldom use Facebook. This means that we do not reach all or near all the Society membership.

It is for this reason that we need to promote an alternative outlet for other members to display their images that they have worked so hard to achieve.

The Society already has an alternative social media site to Facebook. It is a SAPS Flickr page.

<https://www.flickr.com/groups/saps/pool/>

Although established many years ago, it has dropped in popularity through a lack of promotion.

The difference with a Flickr site, is it is all about images, not general postings and other information.

Posting images in Flickr, allows them to be viewed without the distractions of columns and drop in panes, and is an uncluttered format, which displays the exif data of the image for those who are interested in the setting that achieved the result.

It is NOT in competition with SAPS Facebook, rather, to offer members that don't like or use Facebook, a site that is restricted to Society Members only, and is not promoting or offering to invite friends-of-friends, and all the other filter options that turn people off Facebook.

The Flickr site is just about images ...

A suggestion to the committee when discussing Social Media, and the Survey results will be, if we keep the Flickr page open, to keep it simplistic, a site only for images taken by Society members, and to be somewhere where they only post their better images. I will also suggest that it will remain a site where only one image per member, per day, can be posted. A suggestion though is that it be expanded so that general public can view and comment, but will not be able to post images unless a member.

An important point was raised by Graham in respect to Flickr, and that is it has provision for a screen name, that a lot of people use (to remain anonymous) rather than using your own name, but this makes it impersonal, and tends to reduce comments, when you don't know who the person is. Therefore another suggestion will be that people post as themselves, not as an alias.

Food for thought, and I look forward to the committee and your suggestions on our Social Media options. I also look forward to having two Social Media options running for the Society. Facebook definitely, and something else (if not Flickr) as an alternative outlet for displaying our images.

My thoughts ... Greg
